

I'm a resident of Lakeview and an engaged citizen. Like many others, I was inspired by Regina City Council's adoption of a commitment to net-zero GHG emissions by 2050. I'd like to see Council vote to approve the proposed energy and sustainability strategy being put forward on October 28th.

Regina has an opportunity to be a leader in the commitment to climate action. It's crucial that our commitment be for an inclusive and just energy transition. I'd like the city to take bold action to develop new sources of green energy, to electrify and expand public transit, to help low income households reduce their energy and water use through subsidized retrofits, and more. With a committed City Council, I know we can achieve these goals.

Sincerely,

André Magnan
